

Abstract

A catheter system for localized administration of agents through the wall of a blood vessel is provided. Various catheter system constructions which use at least two expandable
5 occluding elements to create the localized site are provided. The catheter system may include a catheter with a variable stiffness along its length. The catheter system may also include a hollow guide wire which is coupled to an expandable occluding element.